Items 44-47 refer to Theodore Roethke's

The Heron

The heron stands in water where the swamp
Has deepened to the blackness of a pool,
Or balances with one leg on a hump
Of marsh grass heaped above a musk-rat hole.

He walks the shallow with an antic grace.
The great feet break the ridges of the sand,
The long eye notes the minnow's hiding place.
His beak is quicker than a human hand.

He jerks a frog across his bony lip,
Then points his heavy bill above the wood.
The wide wings flap but once to lift him up.
A single ripple starts from where he stood.

44. The rhyme scheme of the first and third stanzas of Roethke's "Heron" is characterized by

A) assonance.
B) consonance.
C) dissonance.
D) homeoteleuton.
E) internal rhyme.

45. The persona's musingly reflective appreciation of the heron's characteristic stalking for food is evident in an oxymoronic construction found in

B) line 4.
C) line 5.
D) line 9.
E) line 12.

46. The poem's imagery is, for the most part,

A) auditory.
B) gustatory.
C) olfactory.
D) tactile.
E) visual.

47. Arguably, the poem's major thematic concern is

A) ambulation versus flight among birds.
B) bird watching as a rewarding hobby.
C) the environmental degradation of our wetlands.
D) the feeding habits of various species.
E) the natural world as cyclical.

Items 48-50 refer to Theodore Roethke's

Elegy for Jane

I remember the neckcurls, limp and damp as tendrils;
And her quick look, a sidelong pickerel smile;
And how, once startled into talk, the light syllables leaped for her,
And she balanced in the delight of her thought,
A wren, happy, tail into the wind,
Her song trembling the twigs and small branches.
The shade sang with her;
The leaves, their whispers turned to kissing,
And the mold sang in the bleached valleys under the rose.

Oh, when she was sad, she cast herself down into such a pure depth,
Even a father could not find her:

continued

Scraping her cheek against straw,
Stirring the clearest water.

My sparrow, you are not here,
Waiting like a fern, making a spiny shadow.
The sides of wet stones cannot console me,
Nor the moss, wound with the last light.

If only I could nudge you from this sleep,
My maimed darling, my skittery pigeon.
Over this damp grave I speak the words of my love:
I, with no rights in this matter,
Neither father nor lover.

48. The tone of Roethk'e "Elegy for Jane" is

A) indifferently bitter.
B) dreamily cynical.
C) mockingly philosophical.
D) sentimentally nostalgic.
E) troublingly impassioned.

49. The abundance of simile, as well as the occasioned apostrophe and metaphor, compare Jane or Jane's features to all but a

A) fish.
B) plant.
C) sparrow.
D) wet stone.
E) wren.

50. The figure of speech modeled in the poem's seventh line, in which several figures, including synecdoche, personification, metaphor, and prolepsis, have been compressed into one figure: "the shade sang with her," emphasizing, in this case, nature's response to Jane's voice, is

A) metalepsis.
B) metaphor.
C) metathesis.
D) metonymy.
E) mimesis.

Part 3: Ability in Literary Criticism
15 items (2 points each)

Items 51-53 refer to Ralph Waldo Emerson's

The Rhodora
On Being Asked, Whence Is the Flower?

In May, when sea-winds pierced our solitudes,
I found the fresh Rhodora in the woods,*
Spreading its leafless blooms in a damp nook,
To please the desert and the sluggish brook.
The purple petals fallen in the pool
Made the black water with their beauty gay;
Here might the red-bird come his plumes to cool,
And court the flower that cheapens his array.
Rhodora! if the sages ask thee why
This charm is wasted on the earth and sky,
Tell them, dear, that, if eyes were made for seeing,
Then beauty is its own excuse for Being;
Why thou wert there, O rival of the rose!
I never thought to ask; I never knew;
But in my simple ignorance suppose
The self-same power that brought me there, brought you.

* the rhodora is the azalea

51. The auditory imagery in the first line of Ralph Waldo Emerson's "Rhodora" is given emphasis through

A) alliteration.
B) assonance.
C) consonance.
D) onomatopoeia.
E) sigmatism.

52. The persona's addressing the rhodora, as he does in lines 9 and 11, and again in line 14: "O rival of the rose," are examples of the figure of speech known as

A) apostrophe.
B) hyperbole.
C) irony.
D) personification.
E) symbol.

53. Thematically, Emerson's persona seems to be considering the relative importance of the flower in a comparison that suggests the unity of nature as a consequence of

A) Beauty's being "its own excuse for being."
B) God's having created everything.
C) his solitude's having been pierced by wind.
D) red-birds, roses, and rhodoras all being red.
E) sages answering his simple ignorance.

Items 54-56 refer to William Butler Yeats's

The Fiddler of Dooney

When I play on my fiddle in Dooney.
Folk dance like a wave of the sea;
My cousin is priest in Kilvarnet,
My brother in Mocharabuiee.

I passed my brother and cousin:
They read in their books of prayer;
I read in my book of songs
I bought at the Sligo fair.

When we come at the end of time
To Peter sitting in state,
He will smile on the three old spirits,
But call me first through the gate;

For the good are always the merry,
Save by an evil chance,
And the merry love the fiddle,
And the merry love to dance:

And when the folk there spy me,
They will all come up to me,
With "Here is the fiddler of Dooney!"
And dance like a wave of the sea.

54. Yeats's persona in "The Fiddler of Dooney" compares himself and his role as a fiddler to the

A) book of songs bought at Sligo fair.
B) dancing waves of the sea.
C) folks' love of dancing.
D) seriousness of his brother and cousin's role.
E) spying on fiddlers at the end of the world.

55. The overriding rhyme scheme of Yeats's poem is

A) aaaa.
B) aabb.
C) abab.
D) abba.
E) abcb.

56. The relatively erratic rhythm, along with the variable rhyme scheme of Yeats's poem, suggests the

A) argument among "the three old spirits."
B) evil music that interrupts the priests' prayers.
C) reception that the fiddler receives from Peter.
D) sound of the gate opening for the fiddler.
E) traditional repertoire of the Irish fiddle.

Items 57-60 refer to William Shakespeare's

Sonnet 2

When forty winters shall beseige thy brow,
And dig deep trenches in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery, so gazed on now,
Will be a tatter'd weed, of small worth held:
Then being ask'd where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty days,
To say, within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless praise.
How much more praise deserved thy beauty's use,
If thou couldst answer "This fair child of mine
Shall sum my count and make my old excuse,"
Proving his beauty by succession thine!
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

57. The rhyme scheme of Shakespeare's Sonnet 2 is

A) aabb, ccdd, eeff, gg.
B) abab, cdcd, efef, gg.
C) abbaabba, cdecde.
D) abbaacca, cdcdcd.
E) abba, cddc, effe, gg.

58. The persona's use of the terms "besiege," "fields," "trenches," and "livery" constitutes

A) a controlling image.
B) dialect.
C) metonymy.
D) a paradox.
E) synecdoche.

59. Thematic to the sonnet's basic argument is that

A) beauty does not last.
B) fields often go to weeds.
C) lusty days cause one to grow old quickly.
D) thriftless praise follows shame.
E) youth gives way to winter.

60. The proposed answer, "This fair child of mine / Shall sum my account [. . .]" (lines 10-11), suggests that the beauty of the person being addressed will continue if he or she

A) can answer a math question.
B) can count to forty.
C) praises what is beautiful.
D) produces offspring.
E) survives both the siege and trench warfare.

Items 61-65 refer to Robinson Jeffers's

Hurt Hawks

I

The broken pillar of the wing jags from the clotted shoulder,
The wing trails like a banner in defeat,

No more to use the sky forever but live with famine and pain a few days: cat nor coyote
Will shorten the week of waiting for death, there is game without talons.

He stands under the oak-bush and waits
The lame feet of salvation; at night he remembers freedom
And flies in a dream, the dawns ruin it.

He is strong and pain is worse to the strong, incapacity is worse.
The curs of the day come and torment him
At distance, no one but death the redeemer will humble that head,

The intrepid readiness, the terrible eyes.
The wild God of the world is sometimes merciful to those
That ask mercy, not often to the arrogant.

You do not know him, you communal people, or you have forgotten him;
Intemperate and savage, the hawk remembers him;
Beautiful and wild, the hawks, and men that are dying, remember him.

II

I'd sooner, except the penalties, kill a man than a hawk;
but the great redtail* *a species of buzzard hawk
Had nothing left but unable misery
From the bone too shattered for mending, the wing that trailed under his talons when he moved.

We had fed him six weeks, I gave him freedom,
He wandered over the foreland hill and returned in the evening, asking for death,
Not like a beggar, still eyed with the old
Implacable arrogance.

I gave him the lead gift in the twilight.
What fell was relaxed, Owl-downy, soft feminine feathers; but what Soared: the fierce rush: the night-herons by the flooded river cried fear at its rising
Before it was quite unsheathed from reality.

61. The treatment of the abstraction "salvation" as a concrete form ("lame feet"), as found in line 7 of Robinson Jeffers's "Hurt Hawk," is called

A) allegory.
B) mimesis.
C) personification.
D) reification.
E) zoomorphism.

62. The continuation of the sense and grammatical construction of a line on to the next verse, as found in lines 11-12, is known as

A) anacrusis.
B) complication.
C) enjambment.
D) syntax.
E) truncation.

63. The poem's message might be reduced to

A) I am a lover of feathered creatures.
B) I am capable of killing animals who kill.
C) I am willing to help animals only so much.
D) I do not love man the less but the hawks more.
E) I gave him the lead gift in the twilight.

64. Jeffers's indictment of our culture's divorce from nature, essentially a measure of inadequacy, exalting nature and condemning mankind, is found in

A) lines 3-5.
B) lines 13-15.
C) lines 15-17.
D) lines 18-21.
E) lines 22-25.

65. The "lead gift" of line 26 is

A) arrogance.
B) death.
C) downy feathers.
D) freedom.
E) reality.

The required Tie-Breaking Essay prompt is found on the next page.

Part 4: Tie-Breaking Essay (required)

Note well: Contestants who do not write an essay will be disqualified even if they are not involved in any tie.

Note well: Any essay that does not demonstrate a sincere effort to discuss the assigned topic will be disqualified. The judge(s) should note carefully this criterion when breaking ties: ranking of essays for tie-breaking purposes should be based primarily on how well the topic has been addressed.

Three pages of blank paper have been provided for this essay; however, it is not expected that the essay will be longer than 150 words; however, the essay should reflect the Handbook's notion that an essay is a "moderately brief discussion of a restricted topic": something more than a few sentences.

Read Theodore Roethke's "Orchids," and offer a discussion of the imagery and the confirmation that it provides for Roethke's appreciation for the organic processes that define the soul of the natural, living world.

Orchids

They lean over the path,
Adder-mouthed,
Swaying close to the face,
Coming out, soft and deceptive,
Limp and damp, delicate as a young bird's tongue;
Their fluttery fledgling lips
Move slowly,
Drawing in the warm air.
And at night,
The faint moon falling through whitewashed glass,
The heat going down
So their musky smell comes even stronger,
Drifting down from their mossy cradles:
So many devouring infants!
Soft luminescent fingers,
Lips neither dead nor alive,
Loose ghostly mouths
Breathing.

Part 4: Tie-Breaking Essay

These notes are not intended to be understood as a key for the Tie-Breaking essay prompt; rather, they should serve the judge(s) as a presentation of critical ideas that might appear in an essay responding to the prompt.

Criteria for judging the Tie-Breaking Essay SHOULD include the degree to which the instructions have been followed, the quality of the critical insight offered in response to the selection, the overall effectiveness of the written discussion, and the grammatical correctness of the essay.

Note well that the quality of the contestant's critical insight is more important than the contestant's prose style. In short, the Literary Criticism contest is one that promotes the critical analysis of literature. The quality of the writing, which should never go unappreciated, does not trump evidence of critical analysis.

Critical Notes on Theodore Roethke's "Orchids"

Literary concepts that MIGHT be used by the contestant in a discussion of this poem include alliteration,

assonance,
contrast,
diction,
imagery,
metaphor,
optimism,
personification,
sigmatism,
simile sympathy/empathy, theme, and tone.

The contestant is asked to consider the persona's sensitivity to nature and his appreciation for the organic processes that define the natural world, an appreciation that drives his near-spiritual description of the orchids that is the poem "Orchids."

The imagery is visual and tactile (as well as olfactory); additionally, the word choices suggest a personification (not unlike we find in Wordsworth's daffodil poem). The Roethke-familiar contestant might compare the proximity described in line three and elsewhere to the proximity that shocks in "The Bat."

The young writer might dwell on Roethke's tactile imagery as representative to the poet's sensitivity to nature.

The contestant might see Roethke's focus on the natural world as represented in these orchids as a sensing that there is much more at work than simple botanical growth. The growth of the orchids might be recognized as the growth of an individual's soul, primal in its "Moving slowly / Drawing in the warm air. / [. . .] / The heat going down / [. . .] / Drifting down / [. . .] / Breathing."
