Items 45-48 refer to Samuel Taylor Coleridge's

Constancy to an Ideal Object

Since all that beat about in Nature's range,
Or veer or vanish; why should'st thou remain
The only constant in a world of change,
O yearning Thought! that liv'st but in the brain?
Call to the Hours, that in the distance play,
The faery people of the future day—
Fond Thought! not one of all that shining swarm Will breathe on thee with life-enkindling breath, Till when, like strangers shelt'ring from a storm,
Hope and Despair meet in the porch of Death!
Yet still thou haunt'st me; and though well I see,
She is not thou, and only thou are she,
Still, still as though some dear embodied Good,
Some living Love before my eyes there stood With answering look a ready ear to lend,
I mourn to thee and say—'Ah! loveliest friend!
That this the meed of all my toils might be,
To have a home, an English home, and thee!'
Vain repetition! Home and Thou are one.
The peacefull'st cot, the moon shall shine upon,
Lulled by the thrush and wakened by the lark,
Without thee were but a becalmèd bark,
Whose Helmsman on an ocean waste and wide Sits mute and pale his mouldering helm beside.
And art thou nothing? Such thou art, as when The woodman winding westward up the glen
At wintry dawn, where o'er the sheep-track's maze
The viewless snow-mist weaves a glist'ning haze, Sees full before him, gliding without tread,
An image with a glory round its head;
The enamoured rustic worships its fair hues,
Nor knows he makes the shadow, he pursues!

Items 49-50 refer to Samuel Taylor Coleridge's

Phantom

All look and likeness caught from earth,
All accident of kin and birth,
Had pass'd away. There was no trace Of aught on that illumined face, Upraised beneath the rifted stone
But of one spirit all her own;—
She, she herself, and only she,
Shone through her body visibly.

Part 3: Ability in Literary Criticism 15 items (2 points each)

Items 51-55 refer to Elizabeth Barrett Browning's

If thou must love me, let it be for nought

If thou must love me, let it be for nought
Except for love's sake only. Do not say
'I love her for her smile—her look—her way
Of speaking gently,—for a trick of thought That falls in well with mine, and certes brought A sense of pleasant ease on such a day'—
For these things in themselves, Belovèd, may Be changed, or change for thee, —and love, so wrought, May be unwrought so. Neither love me for Thine own dear pity's wiping my cheeks dry, —
A creature might forget to weep, who bore Thy comfort long, and lose thy love thereby!
But love me for love's sake, that evermore Thou mayst love on, through love's eternity.

51. The thematic concern of Elizabeth Barrett Browning's sonnet is summed up in

55. The sonnet's turn, its volta, is found at the beginning of

A) line 2.
B) line 5.
C) line 9.
D) line 12.
E) line 13.

Items 56-59 refer to Edgar Allan Poe's

Alone

Alone

From childhood's hour I have not been
As others were—I have not seen As others saw—I could not bring My passions from a common spring.
From the same source I have not taken My sorrow—I could not awaken
My heart to joy at the same tone—
And all I loved—I loved alone.
Then—in my childhood—in the dawn
Of a most stormy life—was drawn
From every depth of good and ill
The mystery which binds me still—
From the torrent, or the fountain—
From the red cliff of the mountain—
From the sun that round me rolled
In its autumn tint of gold—
From the lightning in the sky
As it passed me flying by—
From the thunder and the storm—
And the cloud that took the form
(When the rest of Heaven was blue)
Of a demon in my view.

Audubon's Flute

Audubon in the summer woods
by the afternoon river sips his flute, his fingers swimming on the silver as silver notes pour

by the afternoon river, sips
and fills the mosquito-note air with silver as silver notes pour two hundred miles from any wall.

And fills the mosquito-note air
as deer and herons pause, listen,
two hundred miles from any wall,
and sunset plays the stops of river.

As deer and herons pause, listen, the silver pipe sings on his tongue
and sunset plays the stops of river, his breath modeling a melody

Private Means is Dead

Private Means is dead
God rest his soul, officers and fellow-rankers said.

Captive Good, attending Captain Ill
Can tell us quite a lot about the Captain, if he will.

Major Portion
Is a disingenuous person
And as for Major Operation well I guess
We all know what his reputation is

The crux and Colonel
Of the whole matter
(As you may read in the Journal
If it's not tattered)

Lies in the Generals Collapse Debility Panic and Uproar
Who are too old in any case to go to the War.

Required tie-breaking essay prompt on the next page.

Part 4: Tie-Breaking Essay (required)

Note well: Contestants who do not write an essay will be disqualified even if they are not involved in any tie.

Note well: Any essay that does not demonstrate a sincere effort to discuss the assigned topic will be disqualified. The judge(s) should note carefully this criterion when breaking ties: ranking of essays for tie-breaking purposes should be based primarily on how well the topic has been addressed.

Three sheets of paper have been provided for this essay; your written response should reflect the Handbook's notion that an essay is a "moderately brief discussion of a restricted topic": something more than just a few sentences.

Read Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Fancy in Nubibus," and compose an essay that addresses Coleridge's focus on the poet's imagination.

Fancy in Nubibus*
Or, the Poet in the Clouds

O! It is pleasant, with a heart at ease, Just after sunset, or by moonlight skies,
To make the shifting clouds be what you please,
  Or let the easily persuaded eyes
Own each quaint likeness issuing from the mould
  Of a friend's fancy;* or with head bent low
And cheek aslant see rivers flow of gold
  'Twixt crimson banks; and then, a traveller, go From mount to mount through Cloudland, gorgeous land!
  Or list'ning to the tide, with closèd sight,
Be that blind bard,* who on the Chian* strand
  By those deep sounds possessed with inward light, Beheld the Iliad and the Odyssee
  Rise to the swelling of the voiceful sea.

Part 4: Tie-Breaking Essay

These notes are not intended to be understood as a key for the Tie-Breaking Essay prompt; rather, they should serve the judge(s) as a presentation of critical ideas that might appear in an essay responding to the prompt.

Criteria for judging the Tie-Breaking Essay SHOULD include the degree to which the instructions have been followed, the quality of the critical insight offered in response to the selection, the overall effectiveness of the written discussion, and the grammatical correctness of the essay.

Note well that the quality of the contestant's critical insight is more important than the contestant's prose style. In short, the Literary Criticism contest is one that promotes the critical analysis of literature. The quality of the writing, which should never go unappreciated, does not trump evidence of critical analysis.

Critical Notes on Samuel Taylor Coleridge's "Fancy in Nubibus"

Literary concepts that MIGHT be used by the contestant in a discussion of Coleridge's poem include alliteration, allusion,

analogy,
assonance,
auditory imagery,
couplet, elision,
English (Shakespearean) sonnet, esemplastic,
imagination,
metaphor,
mood / tone, quatrain, rhyme scheme, and visual imagery.

Coleridge's sonnet suggests a mediation-as-mental-journey. In addressing the role of the imagination in a poet's encounter with the natural world, the young writer should focus on the poet's imagery, both visual and auditory. The poem's speaker reflects on several analogies in which the imagination takes control: "It is pleasant," he says, and then he reiterates this sentiment in the sequencing "or" in lines 5 and 10. The final analogy, wherein the imagery shifts from visual to auditory, likens the imagination-in-the-present to Homer as the creative fountain, "the inward light," of the Western world.

The contestant might recognize in Coleridge's visual sequence—the "shifting clouds," the shifting clouds as transformed by another's imaginative mind ("a friend's fancy"), and then the travelling upward, perhaps toward divine afflatus, through Cloudland itself—a crescendo from merely delighting in the beauty of nature to the transforming power of the imagination, which is Coleridge's esemplatic power (the imagination's "moulding into a unity" that which it "sees" [see Handbook 182]).

The student of literary criticism might further recognize the extinguishing of the visual, the loss of sight ("closèd sight / [. . .] blind bard"), as a necessary threshold to being able to "see" as a poet-in-the-clouds, more specifically, to allowing the power of the imagination to replace the several abilities of the senses that are usually associated with the poet's mundane, by comparison, powers of description.
